Motivating and Retaining Employees in a Down Economy and What Every Manager Should Know About Human Resources/Legal Compliance

Please join Manpower for a complimentary breakfast event where we will discuss the global, national and local labor market pictures and share insights into why it is more important than ever to have strategies in place to retain your high potential employees. The recovery will come, and with it better opportunities for employees to change jobs. Will the best people stay with your company?

Manpower will also present the latest employment law developments in an engaging and entertaining format. Human Resources are tasked with the responsibility of a company's compliance with its HR policy and related legal obligations. But the litmus test is how well front-line management engages and interacts with people. Management must be held accountable for its behavior and HR must be held accountable for ensuring management knows and understands its obligations. This session identifies those areas of HR/Legal compliance every manager should know.
